Juliaetta Council Met Tuesday Night

All members of the Juliaetta City Council were present for the regular monthly meeting of that group held Tuesday evening, April 19, at the City Hall. Mayor Harold Freeman presided over the meeting of councilmen Jim Cuddy, Bruce May, Dick Groseclose and Frank Gloseclose. Also present was city clerk Nancy Fey, and city employees Ed Campos and Steve Howerton. Guests at the session were Bert Robbins, Carolyn Gravelle, Jack Smith, Elaine Groseclose, Jim Uebelher, Kathy Groseclose and Alice Henson.

Mrs. Gravelle was present to report on the latest activities of the Latah County Centennial Commitee. She is the city's representative on the county board.

Mr. Uebelher is an employee of a Moscow-based televison cable service and was interested in determining if there was interest in the services his company might provide. Mr. Smith was present for the Orofino-based televison service and he was interested in finding what action the city had taken regarding in- Football Game June 4 stallation of TV cable service.

The city has made no definite decision regarding cable service.

There was discussion on an ordinance for setting standards for the placing of mobile homes in the city. The council will contact some other towns to see what ordinances these cities have in dealing with mobile home installation.

The city has drafted a letter which it will send to various state agencies in an attempt to see if the speed limit through Juliaetta might be reduced from the present 35 mph to 25 mph. There is support in town for this type of action to make the highway crossing safer for school children, many of whom now have Rate High in Competition to cross the highway twice each day when school is in session.

The council also approved having Mrs. Fey attend a workshop for city clerks to be held in Culdesac.

He feels one of most urgent problems facing the county at present tion and disposal situation. "We're going to outgrow the county landfill quicker than expected," he said and added that finding a workable solution is going to take time and effort.

The county's juvenile detention facilities are inadequate and the county has until December of this year to comply with the new federal mandates. "At present time we don't have the facilities to keep juveniles separated from adult offenders as the law is going to require." he said. This is another matter the county commissioners must face, Parsley added.

Along the same line, Parsley said he was concerned with the high rate to qualified personnel turn-over at the county level in law enforcemeni. In reviewing the problems facing Latah County now and in the future Parsley said there needs to be better harmony and cooperation between county commission board members and all county departments to see the citizens get the most service for their tax dollar.

"County commissioners need to represent all the county," he said, "not just one district." He went on to remind people that there are both urban and rural areas in Latah County and although both may have work together." he said.
