Ted Groseclose A Candidate for Latah Commissioner

Ted Groseclose, a Juliaetta business man, rates the solid waste disposal problems facing the county in the near future as one of the main concerns, as he campaigns for the Republican nomination for Latah County Commissioner for District 3. Groseclose and Moscow businessman Roy Krauss are both seeking the District 3 position on the Republican ticket in the May 24th primary.

"I feel I can do the people of Latah County an excellent job," Ted told the Gazette Monday afternoon. "I deal with people in all walks of life in my job," he said. Groseclose owns and operates an air conditioning and refrigeration service in Juliaetta. He said his business allows him to travel extensively throughout the county where he comes in contact with farmers, businessmen, salaried workers and retired persons and this has given him a good insight into the concerns and problems the varied interests of the county have.

This is Groseclose's first attempt their reply — they will "stick with at a county office, but he has served their own schools!" It was a very as a commissioner on the South Latand board of trustees that received of the Juliaetta fire department and the election results Tuesday. Both is a former Juliaetta city councilman.
