Centennial Meeting Produced Many Ideas Suggestions

A public meeting last Wednesday evening June 29, attracted an interested crowd of over 25 persons and produced many ideas and suggestions regarding Kendrick's part in the 100th anniversary of its founding. The centennial of both the state of Idaho and Kendrick will be observed in 1990.

At the last meeting of the Kendrick-Juliaetta Community Development Association, president Wayne Harris appointed a committee of Geo. Brocke, Jr., Harry Burmeister, Dana Magnuson and himself to help plan for the city's centennial.

This committee, knowing that any really successful celebration is going to depend on the complete cooperation and assistance of the entire area, decided to first hold a public meeting to find just how much interest Tuesday's meeting seemed to indicate Kendrick wouldn't exist," he said, there was much support for such a celebration.

"We want to do what the people want to do," George Brocke told the group who gathered in the fire hall that evening. "If they want to support it, it will be successful."

Brocke also stressed that any planning just couldn't be for the city of Kendrick alone, but must include the ridge residents. "If it weren't for the people on the ridges there were a number of people a very quick, rough estimate of at the meeting from the ridges and they seemed to indicate a desire to help in the planning completion of a successful centennial.

Centennial Families

One of the first topics brought up at the meeting was the suggestion of recognizing our "centennial families"—that is those families who have been a part of community for 100 years. Brocke said he did just a very quick, rough estimate of the number of these families who would qualify and came up with over 30 names.

Among the ideas brought forth on how to recognize and honor these families was in devoting some space in a local store window featuring family pictures, history and memorabilia. Different families might be featured during the centennial year.

There was excellent interest in this project and a committee composed of Lucille Magnuson, Mark Mustoe, Margie Wilken, Ross Armistage and Nell Heimgartner was appointed to begin preliminary planning. Betty Heimgartner suggested that tours of some locally historical parts of the area might be set up. Tape recordings of pioneer family descendants might also be made not only for this observance but to preserve memories for other times.

It was also suggested that a centennial publication might be possible giving the history of the communities of both Kendrick and Juliaetta and surrounding areas, as well as about families and some of the early people and businesses who helped shape the area. There was also interest in this project.

4th of July Observance

The idea of planning a special 4th of July celebration for 1990 resulted in considerable discussion. Most agreed that it sounded like a good idea with possibly a community of individual family picnics in the park, parades, costumes and maybe even a parade and/or band concert. But then there was the possibility that other events and plans both individually and around the area might be too much competition. And, too, it was suggested, in a small town such as this, many of the people who would be working on such an event would have been doing the work on Locust Blossom Festival and that they might feel this is too much time to devote to outside activities.

There was a discussion of possibly waiting until October 15 (the actual centennial date of the founding of Kendrick) to have such a celebration. Since no consensus on this matter could be obtained, it was decided to table the topic until later.

Other Suggestions

A number of other suggestions and ideas were brought up at the Wednesday meeting. These included:

—Planting a Centennial Tree in both Kendrick and Juliaetta. This idea was well-received and Frank Dammarell and Norma Abrams were appointed to investigate this project.

—What about compiling a recipe book or booklet of recipes from the

Mock Robbery Staged At Kendrick Bank

Last Wednesday afternoon, June 29 two armed men, firing pistols, robbed First Security Bank in Kendrick of an undetermined amount of money. Don't worry—the robbery was arranged by Dirk Hammond, manager of the local branch and Latah County Sheriff Ken Buxton. The mock robbery was part of a training program for bank employees to teach them how to best react in the event "the real thing" ever occurs.

The afternoon's session lasted about two hours and involved Sheriff Buxton and four members of the department from Moscow. Two deputies from the sheriff's office were the "robbers" while two other uniformed deputies were placed outside the bank to prevent any passing citizens from becoming alarmed. The entire "robbery" took only 1½ minutes, Hammond reported. The bank employees were aware that the robbery was to occur.

Hammond said that after the robbery he was impressed with the way the workers had conducted themselves and with the physical descriptions they were able to give of the men involved.

Following the robbery the sheriff and his deputies also conducted a presentation showing workers various types of weapons that might be used in an actual robbery, how to identify suspects and the best ways to conduct themselves to minimize risks to themselves and others.

This "robbery" is part of an on-going training program for First Security personnel, Hammond said. Incidentally, Hammond added that all deposits at the bank are insured with the F. D. I. C.

Meal Site Tidbits—

By Dorothy Horn

Wednesday, June 29 was the monthly celebration for seniors who had birthdays in June. A delicious meal was served with an extra birthday cake for the honorees.

We were royally entertained by a musical group, the Gospel Strings from Lewiston. What beautiful music and songs which everyone enjoyed! We were very happy to have so many visitors present from Lewiston, Clarkston, Moscow, as well as our local seniors.

On Friday, July 1, we celebrated the 4th of July early. Tables were decorated with the usual floral bouquets plus small American flags. Ceremonies began with the usual Pledge of Allegiance, then all enjoyed to sing the Star Spangled Banner with Viola Johns as accompanist.

Everyone should show their respect for our flag, as we are so very fortunate to live in such a wonderful country and enjoy the privilege of freedom!

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to take this opportunity to thank friends, neighbors, and relatives for the cards, phone calls, and flowers I received while I was in the hospital and since returning home. All of this was truly appreciated and I know helped my recovery. Also thanks to the crew of the J-K Ambulance for their quick response and excellent care.

Edna Hamilton

many good cooks in the area, with special emphasis on old-time cooking or recipes that had been in the family for a long time? This was a suggestion from Leasel Abrams, and she will look into this possibility.

—Carolyn Brown suggested that a centennial quilt might be created for the celebration. There was interest in this project, too. Carolyn will check into this.

—The suggestion of a melodrama theatre for the centennial year also received favorable notice and Ellen Magnuson and Richard Abrams were named as a committee to explore this idea.

—Then just before the meeting ended, Mark Mustoe brought up the idea of creating a Centennial Flag for the two communities. This was a suggestion that seemed to really appeal to the group. Nell Heimgartner said she felt one of the sewing or quilting clubs would probably be interested in this project.

Another Meeting July 20

Because of the interest in this meeting, it was decided to have another planning session Wednesday evening, July 20 at 7:00 in the fire hall. All interested people are urged to attend and bring suggestions and opinions with them.

Land Use and Water Quality — Must One Be Sacrificed For The Other?

By Julie Scanlin
Clearwater Soil and Water Conservation District

Land based resource use is key to the way of life in this region, both economically and culturally, with forest uses ranging from timber production to favored hunting grounds and open lands serving as agricultural production base. Water resources on the other hand provide wildlife and fishery habitat, hydro-electric power, municipal water supplies, enhance recreational opportunities for ourselves and tourists as well, and add greatly to our overall quality of life.

Maintenance of both resources for future use is critical to the region's economic and social health and vitality. In response to this concern the Clearwater Soil and Water Conservation District, in cooperation with the Nez Perce District, has worked for three years to develop a plan for educating area agriculturalists to conservation methods to reduce the yearly soil erosion levels and ultimately improve the water quality on primary feeder streams to the Clearwater River. The target area is the Bedrock Creek drainage. During the planning process overall assessments of the stream were made which measured sedimentation and chemical pollution in the stream, as well as the types of farming practices that might be contributing to negative stream impacts. Following this indepth survey of the water and land base alike the District applied for and received a state water quality cost-share grant to address problems identified in the watershed. The grant is provided through the Division of Water Quality as part of the Idaho Agricultural Abatement Program that strives to enhance water quality statewide.

The program strives to educate the farmers and ranchers in the use of "best management practices" and offers cost-share funds to help offset the costs of implementation of those practices. Technical assistance from the Soil Conservation Service is offered to operators while developing a implementation contract, and the District supplies information and equipment, such as a no-till drill for farmer use.

If you would like more information concerning this project, please contact the Clearwater or Nez Perce Soil and Water Conservation District offices.

Grasshopper Management Seen Within Reach

Since ancient times, grasshoppers have competed with man for food. Even today, they are known to be one of the worst enemies of farmers and ranchers. However, thanks to a new approach, grasshopper management appears to be within reach.

The new approach is called integrated pest management. It derives its name from the use of a variety of materials and control techniques, replacing total reliance on aerial applications of chemicals in direct response to large-scale damage. In 1985 and 1986 a high level of damage occurred throughout the northwest, and the farming community came to the conclusion that relief was needed on a continuing basis. Congress responded by establishing the Grasshopper Integrated Pest Management Project, a five-year (1987-1991) combined effort of research and demonstration.

Three million dollars were allocated to the IPM project for operations in 1987 with an additional three million allocated in 1988. Implementation is coordinated by USDA's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).

Six sites in Idaho and North Dakota, each comprising about one million acres form a massive outdoor laboratory for the Grasshopper IPM Project. The demonstration areas consisting primarily of federally managed land include the Little Missouri National Grasslands in Mc Kenzie County, North Dakota, administered by the USDA's Forest Service and the Shoshone District of the U. S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management in southeastern Idaho.

New types of treatment—which includes baits, biological control, new insecticides, and improved formulations of insecticides—are part of project goals. Costs are examined in light of benefits from various treatment methods. Each year's research builds on the past, meeting the final objective: Controlling grasshoppers with the most scientific, economic and safe methods while preventing adverse effects on the environment.

The Grasshopper IPM Project is currently using five substances to reduce grasshopper numbers: Malathion, Seven 4-Oil (Carbaryl), Orthene (Acephate), and Carbaryl bran bait, plus Nosema locustae, a naturally occurring, biological protozoan that causes disease in grasshoppers. The other promising biological control agents such as Entomophaga grylli, and three viruses of natural origin, will be phased in as they become available.

The environmental impact of the project on wildlife, water and vegetation is closely monitored. Project managers aim for the most "environment gentle" grasshopper treatment achievable.

Cooperating federal agencies include: USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Agricultural Research Service, Economic Research Service, Forest Service, and Extension Service; the U. S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management, Fish and Wildlife Service, and National Park Service; and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Universities participating in the research project are: Colorado State, Montana State, New Mexico State, North Dakota State, South Dakota State, University of Idaho, University of Wyoming, and South Dakota School of Mines.

Information gathered by the project becomes part of a so-called "Expert System," built from computer models. This technical method integrates studies of weather, soil analyses, grazing practices, grasshopper phenology and treatment procedures.

Although the expert system is still a prototype, eventually it will

College of Southern Idaho Babies "Big Bertha"

Big Bertha, a 6½ foot, 110 pound, 20-30-year-old white sturgeon from the upper Snake River has made the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and the experimental fish hatchery at the College of Southern Idaho feel like proud parents.

On Saturday, June 25, Big Bertha, as she's affectionately called by CSI students, produced 150,000 eggs resulting in 10,000 to 15,000 fry at the CSI experimental fish hatchery in Twin Falls. The occasion marks the first ever successful spawning of an Idaho sturgeon in a hatchery, and is especially notable because the whole process took over a year to complete.

Big Bertha was captured by IDEFG fish researchers in April of 1987 in the Snake River below Bliss, Idaho. Initial field investigations revealed she was a mature female thought to be ready to spawn. She was transported to the hatchery at CSI for study of the reproductive cycle and investigations of the potential to raise sturgeon in captivity. Bertha, however, had other ideas and failed to "ripen" as the days passed.

Undaunted, researchers and biologists determined to stick with Bertha; but it was only this spring, with the help and application of a pituitary gland extract, that they were able to induce the big fish to spawn.

help pest-control managers design a total grasshopper management system. Such a system will greatly enhance population predictions, treatment timing and treatment selections.

Meanwhile, in its experimental stages, the computer software will soon be available with a user's guide. Thus, the "Expert System" will extend to government and growers alike the most modern techniques in managing an age-old problem.

Summer Reading Activities At Juliaetta Library

On Thursday, June 28, 19 children enjoyed the summer reading activities at the Juliaetta Community Library. After watching the movie, "Yankee Doodle Cricket", everyone made the red, white and blue paper noise makers and had lots of fun with them. On July 7 the craft will be making bird mobiles. Then on Thursday, July 14, Smokey the Bear will be coming to the library to present an interesting program.

Those who have finished their reading requirements this past week and received a prize book award are Rue Hewett, Andrea Kerby, and T. J. Welles.

New books for summer reading enjoyment cover a wide range of interests. The non-fiction ranges from "Young Person's Guide to the Military", by Bradley, to "Wood" by Better Homes with articles on making bookcases and picture frames. For weight conscious people, "A Year of Diet Desserts" by Bingham,
