It was Infrastructure Night at Kendrick Grange; Health Care Costs Discussed

At its meeting on January 21, Kendrick Grange kept the focus for most of the evening on the state of the community's infrastructure. The evening, which began with a pancake feed, featured a presentation on the problems facing health care and also touched upon the latest setback to Juliaetta's water supply program, the need for more local housing, and on the implications of the new Federal highway bill for our local roads and bridges.

Guest speaker during the public portion of the meeting was Steve Perry, a certified public accountant and member of the Gritman Hospital administration. Perry, who was introduced by Gritman board member Dick Benjamin, filled in for hospital administrator Bob Colvin, who had been called away to Boise to confer on health care problems in the state of Idaho. Gritman Hospital, just like our own community health clinic, is part of our community's infrastructure, as are the other hospitals in our area.

Pointing out that health care is the number 2 problem facing the United States next to the economy in general, Perry identified health care's chief problem—the growth in numbers of those not covered by any kind of health insurance. Presently there are 34.7 million Americans lacking any kind of health insurance, and their ranks are growing by 1 million a year. Idaho, ranking 35th among the states, has 15.2% of its population without insurance. Presently in the United States one dollar out of every eight discretionary income goes for medical care. Estimates are that will be one dollar in six by the year 2,000. Given figures like these, it isn't hard to see why on the average, $700 of the price of a new car goes to pay the cost of the auto worker's health insurance.

Where is all the money going? Not to hospitals and doctors, says Perry. Where what is now called the health industry saw moderate growth up to 1980, the creation of the Federal Medicare program that year saw the beginning of a period of rapid growth. Fueled in part by Federal dollars, the industry saw great advances in technology, all of which have high price tags. For example, Gritman is currently building a facility to house an MRI scanner, which it will rent. Compare the price of an MRI at 1½ to 2 million dollars to the cost of an ultrasound, a mere $200,000.

As more sophisticated equipment becomes available, physicians demand that hospitals make it available, partly to sharpen diagnostic procedures and partly to avoid the chance of malpractice suits. Such suits, of course, require lawyers, whose services must also be figured into the cost of medical care, as are the rising costs of malpractice insurance. Labor shortages in the health care industry also drive prices up. The current hourly wage rate at Gritman averages $11.85.

Another factor driving up costs in the hospital is the diagnostic based Medicare fee schedule, which assigns by region a fixed dollar amount or each different kind of illness. This system sees Gritman Hospital writing off 14c on every dollar of service provided, which is lower than other hospitals write off as much as 25c per dollar. And what seems hard to understand is that neighboring hospitals just west across the state line are paid at a higher rate than those in Lewiston and Moscow. Part of the cost of being considered rural!

What can be done to begin to slow this rate of increased spending and provide health care for all Americans? Perry cites five possible answers: First, begin to stress wellness and preventive medicine rather than focusing almost entirely on illness. Next, find more ways to provide for home health care. A growing concept of hospitals without walls offers another option, getting hospitals out into the community with services. The growing sophistication of computers may provide for another way to contain costs. And finally, Perry says a Federal reform of the financing of health care might provide help. The most promising—but also most controversial—is reform based on the Canadian system which because of its single payer feature could lower administrative costs considerably. At present 30 percent of the cost of Medicare goes for administration.

Perry concluded by saying that the health care system will change—in fact, it must change. He encourages Grangers to follow the news and communicate their ideas on the issue not only to their legislators but to the administration at Gritman and other hospitals as well.

KHS Weight Room to Open For Adult Use Feb. 3

It is Supt. of Schools Eldon Taylor and Principal Gale Vallem's wish that the community's adults be afforded the opportunity to utilize the high school weight room. Beginning Monday, Feb. 3 the weight room will be open for both men and women from 6:00 to 7:30 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

This will be an informal session and each adult may work at his/her own pace.

Because of liability, under NO CIRCUMSTANCES will anyone under the age of 18 years be permitted at these times (no exceptions).

Here is the opportunity for the community to use this facility that so many of you helped to provide. So give it a try—it could be fun as well as rewarding.

Hospital Notes

Wolf—
Leonard Wolf improved enough that he was discharged from St. Joseph Regional Medical Center in Lewiston. Both Leonard and his wife, Coryell are staying at the Lewiston Care Center.

Eckroth—
Jan. 17, Seth Eckroth had the misfortune of breaking his right leg and ankle and suffering other injuries in an accident at the high school gymnasium last week. He was in the hospital three days and is now home recovering. He is to be completely off the damaged leg for 5 weeks.

Seth and his parents, Wally and Iris Eckroth are very grateful to Principal Gale Vallem for his on-the-spot first aid and to the EMT crew of Phil, Donna and Scott Helnen, Connie Hedler and Sally Browning for their quick and competent attention.

The Eckroths say we are most fortunate in our community to have such a caring and capable group of people such as the EMT's to help in time of need.

Thanks from Millie C.—

I am truly thankful to all my family (especially Pat), and my many friends for all the consideration and love shown during my long haul recovery from broken vertebrae and hip.

The phone calls, cards, flowers and visits meant so much to me during this slow time of healing. I am home and so very pleased to be here.

Come see me, and again, Thank You dear friends and family.

Most were "Cautiously Optimistic" after Juliaetta Grant Meeting Thursday Night

Most of the people, both local residents and personnel from several state agencies seemed to be "cautiously optimistic" about Juliaetta's chances of getting a $400,000 block grant reinstated. The public meeting was held Thursday evening, Jan. 23 at the Elementary School gym and had been called by the city council to explain to citizens about the Dept. of Commerce's termination of the grant that had been made about one year ago to the city.

The grant would be used to help the city installed a water treatment plant to take water from the Potlatch River, treat it, and make it available to Juliaetta residents and end a chronic water shortage for the city. As it's share of the project Juliaetta residents had approved a $250,000 water revenue bond. Since then, the city council felt it had been moving slowly, but satisfactorily, on the project, but the state apparently felt otherwise and two weeks ago notified the council that the grant had been terminated.

As could be expected, the cancellation of the grant was a stunning blow to the city's plans. The first reaction to the news was the council's letter to the Dept. of Commerce requesting reconsideration of its (the state's) action. The second reaction of the council was to call for public meeting to explain to citizens just what had happened. Representatives of the various state and federal agencies involved were also invited to be present at the meeting.

The community's response to the public meeting was excellent and reflected just how serious Juliaetta was in wishing to end its water problems: over 175 were present at the Thursday meeting.

Mayor Jeff Lohman called the meeting to order and thanked those who were present for taking their time and effort to be part of the process. He then turned the meeting over to Will Herrington, the city's attorney.

Herrington, who has been involved in the water project since its beginning, told the audience that "the reason we're getting you out tonight was to talk about how you can help in getting the grant reinstated." He said that since the start problems have plagued the project.

The city was, and is, deeply in debt from its last sewer system improvement and one of the first hurdles was getting those who hold existing revenue bonds to agree to let the city go deeper in debt. Because the proposed plan requires taking water from the Potlatch River, the process involves obtaining environmental approval and permission. And, also, because the project calls for taking water from the river, some of the construction must be done when the water flow is at its lowest level. This adds the extra burden of a time factor as to when the work can be done.

Herrington also told the group that the project is going to cost more money than the first estimates indicated.

Letting people who might influence a decision to reinstate the grant, (legislators, county commissioners, council members, state and federal agencies), know how important an adequate water system is to the city is one of the most valuable helps local citizens can give to the city at this time, the attorney said. Writing letters of support is vital.

Among the visitors present that evening were Kaye Frances and Candice Durusu of the Idaho Dept. of Commerce, Mark Casavara of the Farm Home Administration, and Greg Tisdale of the State Water Quality agency. Jack Hammond,, Juliaetta Centennial Meeting Feb. 5

The Juliaetta Centennial Committee will meet in regular session on Wednesday, Feb. 5 at 7:00 p. m. at the Juliaetta Centennial Center (old Granny's Pantry bldg.).

It should be pointed out that the Centennial date is only about 3 months from now and there is much to be done between now and May 2. Lots of help is needed. Please be at this meeting if you want to be a part of the celebration.

the city engineer, was also present. The reasons that the grant was terminated appeared to be based on four main points:

1. The goals of the project were not accomplished in prompt fashion;
2. Bids were let out before all required environmental action was completed;
3. Financial problems (this included present indebtedness); and
4. There seemed to be (in the state's opinion), a lack of good administration (paper work control), on the project. The city does not have a full-time administrator, but Herrington hinted that such a person may have to be retained if the project is going to be successfully developed.

There seemed to be a sincere interest from the state agencies in seeing that the grant was restored and also in working with the city to solve the water problems. But, there was also a need to convince the state that the project will succeed. "We don't want to be put in a position of having to ask for our money back," said Kaye Frances of Dept. of Commerce. Frances's words were echoed by Candice Durusu, also of the Dept. of Commerce and overseer of the block grants. She told the audience that it was, "a difficult decision for the Department to terminate this grant!" She added that, "We want to gather information to take back to Boise to help get a reconsideration." We want to work with you, Ms. Durusu's theme, "It's looking pretty good to us," she concluded.

Providing the city is successful in getting the grant of $400,000 reinstated, it appears that the cost of original project is going to exceed the first estimate. The city will then be faced with finding more money or cutting back on the scope of the original plans such as decreasing the capacity of the new system. The city also indicated that it may have to find the funds to pay for a full-time manager of the project while it is under construction. Mayor Lohman told the group that the city and its residents are also going to have to find new ways to conserve water. He called for a citizens committee which would work with the council for this purpose. Several agreed to volunteer for this committee and it is understood that a member selection will be made by the council soon.

This was a good, well-conducted meeting. Intelligent questions were asked and answered and the tone of the gathering could be described as "positive".

The Juliaetta City Council wishes to thank the Elementary School for the use of the gymnasium and also expresses appreciation to Principal Emily Fredenburg and Dave Jones and all the others who helped prepare for the meeting.

Park News

By Jody Smith

Warmer and wetter weather has softened area roads to the point that if conditions don't change for the cooler, a load limit will probably be posted on the Park road before this goes to press.

The main problem in Park in recent weeks, has been stretching time to accomplish what has to be done. (Bet that's unique to Park, isn't it?)

Jerry Smith enjoyed lunch with Lee Horning at Avon Tuesday, as they made a business trip to Princeton. Jerry and Jody were in Moscow on business Thursday.

Mrs. Genny Brown, Bovill's kindergarten teacher, 13 of her students, three Moms, and the bus driver, Carolyn Pearson, enjoyed a Friday morning visit to Smith's farm. They held and petted a tiny baby piglet, cuddled a calf, stroked a turkey and bounced along on a hayride to visit cattle and horses, and peered into pens of rabbits and chickens. Jerry Smith was in Deary on business Friday afternoon. Andre Molsee, Elk River, made a brief visit later in the afternoon. All the Smiths gathered at Juliaetta for a work day at Mom Daniel's Saturday. Clinton and Ethel attended the Kendrick-Deary basketball game on Saturday evening and were pleased to visit with a lot of old friends. A high point for Ethel was getting to visit her classmate Joyce and Rudy Johnson of Ephrata, Wash., who with Joyce's mother, Laura Johnson, were at the game to watch Jeff Ward, Joyce's nephew, play the JV game. Jeff is the son of Dennis and Bonnie Ward of Avon. Terry and Inez Willenborg visited her sister and brother-in-law, Wanda and Kary Enger Saturday. Visiting Jerry and Jody Smith on Sunday were Ethel Smith, Andre Molsee and sons, and Ethan and Amon and their young friend, the Lovell boy, from Pottlatch.
