

Meeting July 11—

Transportation Dept. In Kendrick to Answer Questions

By Frank Jacobson

Devin Rigby, Assistant District Engineer for the Idaho Department of Transportation, will be holding a public meeting here on Tuesday, July 11, to answer questions concerning the department's planned reconstruction of State Highway 3 through Kendrick. The time and place will be announced later.

The last public meeting providing information concerning the Highway 3 or Main Street project was held under the auspices of the City of Kendrick back on April 5. Three government entities were represented. First, the City of Kendrick, its Mayor and Council, responsible for dealing with sewer and water line deficiencies. Second, Clearwater Economic Development Association, represented by its then new director, Joe Glick, who would assist Kendrick in obtaining the Community Development Block Grant funding needed to bring the sewer and water lines to acceptable standards.

The third government party at that meeting was the Department of Transportation, represented by district engineer Jim Carpenter, who was there to assure citizens that his department had the necessary funding and indeed stood ready to completely rebuild the highway through town once the city met the deadline for updating its underground utilities. Failure to meet that deadline would mean that Kendrick, together with its Main Street project, would go back to the end of the line and that pothole filling would be the order of the day for a few more years.

Also present at that April 5 meeting were a couple of "loose cannons" who did little to promote rational discussion of the difficult issues involved in such a major undertaking. Together they generated a lot of heat but shed little light on the subject.

Since then Kendrick's officials have had their hands full struggling with the problems of seeing the engineering study of Main Street's underground utilities completed in time for them to move forward with financing the project. For that reason, if for no other, the Mayor and Council members are in no position to answer citizen questions about the particulars of the highway project, although they certainly share an interest in wanting to know as much as possible about it. They have even postponed their regularly scheduled meeting in order to be present at the July 11 session.

Meanwhile, Joe Glick, who to his credit originally called for numerous public meetings to keep the public informed of progress, has sat and seen nearly three months slip by without there being a single public session. And the Department of Transportation, being the kind of can-do engineers that they are, seemingly have been just as happy not having to make what to them must seem pointless public presentations. They just want to get on with the job.

The problem is, though that the number of "loose cannons" bouncing around on the whole highway issue may be increasing in number. The word is that many questions are being raised about the specifics of the highway's construction generally and particularly about its effect on the heart of the business district.

For example, some folks remember something being said back in April about there being no Federal dollars involved in this highway project. Does this mean, they wonder, that this project will not be built to Federal standards? Will this turn out to be a "schlock" job that like a portion of Highway 3 up the grade out of Kendrick will start to come unglued before too long?

Others remember something being said about the possibility of providing new sidewalks as part of the project, at least in the downtown area. Word now is that there is no provision for sidewalks anywhere. And what about the configuration of parking areas to sidewalk in the block between 6th and 7th streets? Will that change?

Some merchants have questions about how the construction can proceed and still provide customers access to businesses. Can one half of Main Street be upgraded while the other half carries traffic? If not, what about access and the routing of traffic through town?

These are examples of some of the questions one hears being raised. There are probably many others, some of which are being saved for the July 11 meeting. And some that will never be raised publicly but will indeed fester on suspicion and distrust of government's intentions and ability. Some of the questions will be shot from "loose cannons" rolling about on the deck of a public meeting where order, reasonableness, and mutual trust should set the tone.

If you have questions or concerns about the highway reconstruction program in Kendrick, questions that only the Department of Transportation can answer, jot them down now and share them either with the Kendrick-Juliaetta Community Development Association's president, Dana Magnuson, or with your reporter, whose address is Route 1, Box 14, Kendrick Together we can try to assure that there is some logic to the order of topics covered at the July 11 meeting. We can do this by letting Kevin Rigby of the Department of Transportation know in advance what questions are being raised here.

While this approach will not necessarily silence the "loose cannons" who generate more heat than light, it will help assure that the concerns of others are considered as well in an orderly fashion. Know that this effort is being undertaken in the interest of having a better informed public.

Kendrick Area Host Families Needed For Foreign Youth

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive soon into the Kendrick area for second semester homestays, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P. I. E.) Executive Director, John Doty, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families. P. I. E. currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where students attend local high schools.

P. I. E. area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the perfect match. As there are no "typical" host families, P. I. E. can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Families who host for P. I. E. are also eligible to claim a $50.00 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

For the upcoming programs, P. I. E. has students from Spain, Germany, Poland, Russia, Finland, Argentina, Brazil, Columbia, Paraguay, Australia, New Zealand, Croatia and many other countries. P. I. E. has also been invited to participate in a special government-funded program to bring scholarship students from the Newly Independent States of the former Soviet Union to the United States. P. I. E. is a non-profit educational organization that has sponsored more than 18,000 students from 23 countries since its founding in 1975. The organization is designated by the United States Information Agency and is listed by the Council on Standards for International Educational Travel CSJET, certifying that the organization complies with the standards set forth in CSJET's Standards for International Educational Travel Programs.

Kendrick area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative may call P. I. E., toll-free, at 1-800-631-1818. The agency also has travel/study program opportunities available for American high school students as well as possibilities for community volunteers to assist and work with area host families, students and schools.

Charlie Bowers opened the Flag Day meal site session with a review of flag etiquette and history. Interesting facts were told that reminded the group of the early days of the country and its struggle.

Music theme of the day was "Smile" and all agreed with leader Vera Hutcheson that it's easier to smile than to frown.

Safe Use of Garden Chemicals Advised

Ridding a garden of unwelcome guests such as weeds, snails and insects is often accomplished with store-bought pesticides.

Dr. Lucio Costa, director of the toxicology program at the University of Washington School of Public Health and Community Medicine, says garden chemicals are relatively safe products as long as common sense is used when handling and storing them.

Common garden products include insecticides to kill insects and herbicides for weeds. While some industrial-strength chemicals used for large-scale agriculture are toxic if inhaled or if skin or eyes are exposed, common garden chemicals such as Roundup have much lower toxicity levels.

Many garden problems can be managed without using commercial products. Aphids, for example, can often be controlled by knocking them off a plant with a spray of plain water. And pulling weeds by hand can be a good form of exercise.

A few basic rules to follow when using garden pesticides —Clear the area of children and pets before applying products. Any toys or other objects scattered about should also be put away. Just to be on the safe side, Costa advises pregnant women to avoid contact with chemical products as well.

—Wear gloves and safety glasses when applying sprayed-on chemicals to prevent contact with skin and eyes. If this occurs, immediately wash skin thoroughly with soap and water and/or flush eyes with water.

—Avoid applying sprayed-on chemicals on a windy day, and make sure the area has dried thoroughly before allowing others to return.

—Use the correct amount of pesticides. When it comes to chemical application the "more is better" rule does not apply. Just as you should only take the amount of medication your doctor prescribes, you should also use only the amount of pesticide specified in the product's directions, Costa says.

—Don't pour pesticide products down the drain. If you have some left, apply it to other plants listed on the label or contact your local health department for information about disposal procedures in your area.

—Never store chemicals in a bottle other than a clearly marked, original container. These containers should also be locked up well out of reach of children. Accidental ingestion is often the cause of serious poisonings, Costa says, stressing pesticides should be treated like other toxic household products including bleach and liquid drainers.

—Be careful when using products, called rodenticides, to control rats and mice. Children may mistake the small pellets, placed on the ground or stored in bottles, as candy.

—Don't panic if you or a person you know is accidentally exposed to garden chemicals. Contact your local poison control center for specific information about what to do. If immediate health problems, such as a burned throat or upset stomach occur, it's best to go to a hospital emergency room.

You don't have to be a toxicologist to know the do's and don'ts of garden chemical use. All you need to do is follow product directions and use common sense when handling these products.

Farm and Ranch Recreation is Big Business in Idaho

Farm and ranch recreation in Idaho is big business and generates over $10.2 million in annual gross revenue. The Idaho Department of Agriculture has identified 60 farms and ranches that offer recreational services to tourists. Services range from horseback rides and sleigh/wagon rides to hunting, fishing and cross-country skiing.

A farm and ranch recreation business impact survey sponsored by the Idaho Department of Agriculture and analyzed by RLS International of Cheyenne, Wyoming indicates a rapidly growing interest in ranch recreation. Using a multiplier factor of 3.5 (67% of guests were from out-of-state), the revenue generated for the Idaho Tourism industry by these 60 operators is approximately $36 million.

According to Laua Hobbs, Division of Agricultural Marketing and Development, "Farm and ranch owners can generate additional income from their property by charging for its recreational value. Many people who do not live on a farm, 98.5% of the American population, will pay a premium to vacation on a ranch or go on a hay ride." With travelers seeking out authentic western-style experiences in increasing numbers, industry growth is expected to continue. Idaho is an ideal state for farm and ranch recreation because of its uncrowded rural setting, diverse agricultural base and friendly people," continues Hobbs.

The research revealed that operations range greatly in size from 13 acres to 22,000 acres. On average, recreational enterprises were established in 1989, although several started their recreation operations within the last 2 to 3 years. Only about one-third of the guests were from Idaho and seven percent were international guests.

The distinction was made between working ranches that receive a secondary income from guests and and guest ranches whose primary source of income is from guests. On average, working ranches had a shorter season of operation, hosted fewer guests and guest stays were shorter in duration. Overall, guests stayed an average of 3.85 days. Of the operations not offering overnight accommodations, the average guest stayed 3.2 hours.

To help the agricultural industry capitalize upon tourist opportunities, the Idaho Department of Agriculture provides a number of services to landowners including informational publications and workshops. A "Farm and Ranch Recreation Guide" has also been published in cooperation with the Department of Commerce to help tourists select their ideal ranch vacation. For information, contact the Department of Agriculture at (208) 334-2227.
