Letters to the Editor . . .

August 12

Hooray! Juliaetta has their new park, or rather baseball field. What happened to the tennis courts, basketball courts, or a place to play "horseshoes" or maybe some trees with grass and picnic tables? The ball field serves an elite few. How about the rest of the town? There must be good revenue in baseball! Is the baseball field more important than dust control?

By the way, have you tasted Juliaetta water lately?

Never Look Back

No blades turn on the silent windmill,
The broken pump no tubs ever fill.
Resting in the yard a Model T rests,
Only birds fly in to annual nests.
Empty stalls beyond a sagging barn door
Echo sound of hooves on the splintered floor.
Weathered boards still guard the forlorn house,
No one comes to chase the resident mouse.
Memories flood back to another day
As Grandpa jumps on wheels to rush away.
