The market board of directors thank Dell for his efforts. Also thanks to Maxine Pounder, Lewiston, and friends for providing last market day's entertainment.

A great deal of thanks to the public who so strongly supported the market and the entertainment, and thanks to all local and area business sponsors as well as the large number of market participants.

It's good for you to donate blood

Giving blood not only saves lives, but it's actually good for you. Giving blood can help reduce the risk of heart attacks in adults over the age of 45. It is also a good way to monitor your health. At a blood drive you have your blood pressure taken, heart rate, iron level and your temperature checked. When we donate blood we feel good because we're helping others. Donating blood is also safe! Every precaution is taken when donating and handling blood. A screening process and testing of blood also ensures a safe blood supply.

If you are willing and able, please help by donating blood Monday, Oct. 6th at the Kendrick Fire Hall. This blood drive is sponsored by the Kendrick-Juliaetta Lions Club and will be administered by the Inland Northwest Blood Center in Spokane. A few volunteers that are unable to give blood are needed as well as lots of blood donors.

We need to schedule as many donor appointments before the Drive as possible. Call Ron or Lynnette at 289-5502 days (289-4303 evens.) to get a time slot that works for you or for more information. Walk-ins are welcome but a small wait will need to be expected without an appointment.

Loujuana Reid, 52, Claimed by Cancer

Loujuana was born October 21, 1944 to Worthan and Vera Broadhurst Rawson at St. Anthony, Idaho. She grew up at Elk River and married Mark Reid April 1, 1960 at Moscow, Idaho. The couple made their home at Elk River until 1979 when they moved to Juliaetta. She spent summers at Calder with her husband and was a homemaker all her life. She enjoyed crocheting and knitting. She also enjoyed cooking and picking huckleberries and being with her children and grandchildren.

History Workshop at LCSC Saturday to Offer Wide Variety of Helps

The History Workshop at LCSC Williams Conference Center this coming Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. will include a wide variety of presentations, displays, and handouts telling how to preserve family and community history. For example, speakers will provide tips regarding such topics as interviewing, recording, transcribing, camcording, doing internet research recording, doing internet research and planning a regional homepage and forum for public discussion.

Workshop goals include seeing and learning what kinds of history others are preserving in our region and the skills needed. Another goal—full of possibility certainly for developing a sense of community in the small towns in the region—is that of creating a regional history team to gather individual activity findings and reports and, possibly, publish them in a quarterly newsletter. Even more sophisticated is the goal of creating and maintaining an internet forum homepage to collect, document and publish works.

Goals such as these are central to the mission of LCSC's Institute for Community Development—to help towns identify and further the sense of community. By-products of such efforts include economic as well as social advantages.

As your reporter understands it, this workshop is meant to equip not only the individual preserver of history but also to assist group efforts to capture a sense of a region's past and how that relates to today's challenges economically and socially.

The expectation of the workshop coordinators is that communities, dates, and topics can be selected for follow-up project assistance workshops. Future efforts depend on the response to this initial offering.

While it's not too late to register for the workshop by mail (forms are available at the Juliaetta Library), you can also register at the door on Saturday morning. Bring a large 3-ring notebook for taking home handouts. A $10 fee covers lunch and beverage charge.

Participants are encouraged to bring samples of their own work in progress. In this way, we can learn from each other. Remember, that's this coming Saturday morning at the Williams Conference Center. Call Nancy Webster at (208) 435-4669 if you have questions.

Woodcrafters Displayed Variety of Skills and the Pleasure of working with Wood

By Frank Jacobson

Despite rain, high winds, and generally chilly weather, a few determined woodcrafters were on hand at Kendrick's city park last Friday and Saturday to celebrate the area's first annual Woodcraft Festival and Exhibition. Promoted by Malcolm Dell of Central Idaho Woodnet out of Orofino, with the assistance of Phyllis Berg of the Kendrick-Juliaetta Community Development Association, the weekend attraction was intended to show off the economic advantage of turning regional resources into value-added products. In this case, turning the raw products of the forest industry into beautiful and useful hand-crafted items for use in the home environment.

While the well-crafted items on display were indeed beautiful, useful, and moderately priced, three of the four craftsmen this reporter visited with were there primarily because they enjoy working with wood, not to make a living. Three of the four are retired, two of them just this year. And, needless to say, all enjoy living in the Northwest.

Syl Kunze of Clarkston is a retired road construction man and enjoys turning wood into sturdy yard furniture, adult and kids rockers, bird and human feeders (the latter a clever item that dispenses peanuts), and other products. Lee Newell, probably about the same age as Syl, looked familiar. Of course! Used to see him wheeling Snyder's bread into Phil's Family Foods. Retired now, Lee specializes in hand engraving and sand blasting wood and glass, turning out customized, personalized clocks, frames, and mirrors, his display also included handsome occasional pieces and wall hangings.

Certainly the most imaginative of the three is Tom Brimmer of Freeman Creek Road, a retired sales manager for Food Services of America, who specializes in converting wood from old buildings into intriguing bird houses and other miniature structures. Tom can point to various elements in any of his creations and tell you specifically where they came from, including for example the old Kamiah High or a nearby dairy farm. In some cases, he includes somewhere on his creation the date of the original structure which provided the source of his materials. He and his wife, a retired WSU professor, enjoy the natural beauty surrounding their home overlooking a game-filled meadow. And, obviously, Tom enjoys working with wood.

The fourth craftsman, representing Wood Land Stewardship Institute of Deary, is into wood products to help make a living. And of the woodcrafters present in the park on Friday he probably was the most successful so far as sales. Thanks to a small crowd of folks who moved from the Antelope Inn at closing down to his display area. Cleaned him out of handmade jewel boxes and bought all but two rustic shelves. Yes, Shannon Hurt ("like in pain, ag-go-nie") was happy for the action. Given his success, maybe Phyllis Berg needs to consider changing the venue for the community market!

Wood Land Stewardship Institute, managed by Mark Germain, best fits the picture of a deliberate effort to diversify the economy and at the same time to show concern for the environment and for the men and animals who harvest the wood that can be converted into value-added wood products. Providing special training for tree care professionals, the Institute promotes natural forest management using horses as the ideal tool for the woodland steward. It also promotes better forest products utilization, especially in the area of developing products and markets for the tremendous volumes of urban hardwoods and small round forest products that could produce numerous small enterprises.

While the idea of better forest products utilization is central to the principle of economic diversification, the emphasis at last week's festival was rather on having fun as a retiree working with wood. Which is to take nothing away from the skill and craft of those participating. If there is a second festival, let's hope the weather cooperates. Attending will be well worth your time!

City Elections Set for Nov. 4

The filing date for petitions of candidacy in the November 4 city elections has passed and unless a write-in campaign develops, there will be only one contested position in Kendrick and none in Juliaetta.

Kendrick will vote on the office of mayor this year and incumbent mayor Jerry L. Brown is running unopposed for this position.

Also up for election in November are two seats on the city council. Three candidates have filed for the two positions: Incumbent Milton Patterson will be seeking a second term. Others filing for the two seats are Dennis Lukecart and Ron Johnson. Incumbent Kay Morey has declined to seek another term. Both positions are for four-year terms.

In Juliaetta incumbent Lowell Cutshaw is unopposed in his bid for his re-election to a two-year term.

Keith Ford and Debra Harris are running for the two four-year council positions.

Hill & Valley Garden Club Plans for Future Events

Hill & Valley has six nationally accredited, and five student, judges. The club was pleased to learn that it had received the Idaho State Garden Club of the Year Award.

Cindy Henry gave a book review on landscaping by John Brookes.

Hostesses were Patti Silflow and Betty Watts-Bell.

Linda Fey Recovering From Lawn Mower Accident

Bob and Helen Heidenreich have received word that their daughter-in-law, Linda (Mrs. Eldon) Fey is recuperating satisfactorily from a recent lawn mower accident in which she suffered a severed thumb, broken wrist, and extreme tissue damage to her right hand.

She was flown to Harborview Hospital in Seattle where she underwent 10 hours of surgery and later transferred to University Hospital for skin grafting procedures.

She is expected to return to her home Thursday at 2727 Grangemont Road in Orofino.

Smiths were neighbor Jeff Schroeder and his brother Gary from Moscow. The Smiths made an afternoon trip to visit their daughter and son-in-law Barbara and Dean Kinzer and daughters. After a delicious dinner they were introduced to the family's livestock, including Joy and Erin's sheep. Both girls won their divisions in fitting and showing their sheep at this fall's Whitman County Fair. In the final competition Joy narrowly won over Erin to become Grand Champion sheep "showperson." She also placed well in the round robin, competing against other champions in showing beef, swine and sheep.

On their way home they visited Marley and Shirley Gunther in Moscow who were celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary.

Jerry and Ethel Smith received word Monday of the death Sunday evening of their cousin Russell Smith of the Portland area, of cancer. Smith, 61, was the son of late Jim and Olive Keeler Smith. He is survived by his wife Caroline at the family home, five children, and a sister, Beatrice Ann Horans of Navajo, Calif. His uncle and aunt, Ted and Iris Vaughn live in Lewiston, and another uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Keeler, live in Clarkston.

Jerry Smith went to Lewiston Saturday where he had a brief visit with his niece Kay Stout and family.

The Smith's son Jim and his daughters from Hayden Lake also visited Lewiston where Sarah played volleyball with her teammates against Sacajawea and Jennifer Jr. High teams, winning both matches. Scott Smith had stopped off at his grandparents' place to re-acquaint with his filly. His dad and sisters returned for an enjoyable evening with the horses and supper with grandma and grandpa before returning home.

- Please have items out by 7:30 a. m. Thursdays
- It would help if you would rinse all cans and make sure they are empty. You do not have to take the labels off.
- Cardboard must be flattened. It would be very space saving if everything else was also flattened.

Food Handling Practices Highlighted in September

More than 21,000 employees of Idaho food establishments have participated in supervisory food safety and sanitation training since a 1993 rule made it mandatory, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare announced this week.

The success of the program has initiated an expansion of the training program. A food worker training program (for non-supervisory employees) will be implemented the first of the year and managed by the food industry.

"The combined training will ensure that all employees, with food-related duties, at a food establishment receive food safety training," said Don Brothers, Food Protection Program Supervisor with the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "Currently, every food establishment in the state has received a copy of the rules and a food safety manual."

Governor Phil Batt pledged his support for more education during September's Food Safety Education Month. A proclamation signed by the Governor focuses attention on safe food handling practices and coincides with nationwide attention to preventing foodborne illness.

According to "Food safety from Farm to Table—A Report to the President," dated May, 1997, it is estimated that as many as 9,000 deaths and 6.5 to 33 million illnesses in the United States each year are food-related.

"Increased interest in food safety education and implementing science-based regulatory programs will contribute to a reduction of foodborne illness in the country and in Idaho," said Senator Hal Bunderson, R-Meridian.

Bunderson chaired a Legislative Task Force on Food Safety in 1994. Primary recommendations of the task force were to put greater emphasis on food safety training and improved enforcement programs.

"Based on foodborne illness outbreak data, we know where food safety should be emphasized," said Dr. Christine Hahn, State Epidemiologist with the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "It's every bit as important in the home kitchen as in the food establishment," she said.

A 1996 report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, showed that the following four factors contributed to most foodborne illness outbreaks:

1. Improper Holding Temperatures. This factor contributes to most of the outbreaks. Keep perishable food hot (140F or above or above) or keep it cold (45F or below), and heat and cool food fast—do not let perishable food stay in the "danger zone" (between 45F and 140F) for more than four hours.
2. Not Washing Hands. Not washing hands is the second leading cause of outbreaks. Washing hands after using the toilet is a "must." Also, wash hands before preparing food, after touching raw foods—especially meats—and as often as necessary to avoid contaminating food and equipment.
3. Inadequate Cooking. There are no shortcuts to cooking food. Follow "currently recognized" cooking instructions and requirements. All E. coli outbreaks involving meats could have been prevented by proper cooking.
4. Contaminated Equipment. The equipment receiving food should be properly washed and rinsed (sanitization is also required by food establishments)—wiping a piece of equipment with a cloth or sponge will not suffice. Improperly cleaned cutting boards and work surfaces used for raw and "ready-to-eat" food presents a great risk of cross-contamination.
